Eagan, MN January 22, 2018 – TimeSolv, a leading provider of web-based software for legal billing and timekeeping, released an update last week that features the ability for law firms to easily and quickly split their invoices to send to multiple parties.

This new feature allows users to split a matter as many times as they need and allocate the percentage of the invoice as they'd like. For example, if needed, a matter could be split three ways but one party could be responsible for 50% of the invoice total, the second party pays 30% and the third party is assigned the remaining 20%. The ability to split in an infinite number of ways and percentages means TimeSolv can handle any unique billing situation that occurs.

The flexibility of TimeSolv's split billing is already paying dividends for Keith Walther at Rose Law Group in Scottsdale, Arizona.

"I was very excited to see TimeSolv implement the split billing feature, especially since we currently have a couple of significant matters that require different split billing set ups," explained Walther. "It was incredibly easy to use and I particularly liked how you have the ability to set the percentage between the clients receiving the split bills; it didn't automatically assume it would be a 50/50 split."

TimeSolv CEO Raza Hasan explained the reasoning behind this feature development. "Two things really led us to develop the ability to not just split bills but do it in a very flexible way. We heard from many, many of our clients who needed the ability to split an invoice and we also saw in examining the cloud-based billing landscape that this was a feature not offered by many software vendors."

"We've always prided ourselves on having the most robust billing features available and split billing adds to that arsenal," said Hasan. "We can confidently say that no other cloud-based software offers the flexibility TimeSolv does in how you bill your clients. From adaptable billing rates that are unmatched to split billing now, we can handle every billing scenario."
